A DEADLOCK IN PROSPECT
How a Democratic Governor Was Elected in Connecticut.
HARTFORD (Cl.) Jan. 6.—[By the Associated Press] The General Assembly meets tomorrow. In the Senate the Democrats have ten majorities and in the House the Republicans have sixteen majority. The official returns of the last election show a majority of 26 votes for Morris, Democratic candidate for Governor. Several hundred Prohibition votes throughout the State have been cast out, and other votes of both parties cast out for various reasons. The Republicans insist that the matter be referred to the whole State. Democrats insist that Morris be elected. There is every prospect for a deadlock Legislature.

Montana's Legislative Situation

HELENA, Jan. 6.—There was change in the legislative situation today. The Senate and Democratic House met in joint session and Governor read a message. The Governor calls attention to the danger that may result from a failure of reelection this session. There is no provision for canvassing the State election in 1892 in regard to choosing the electors of electors. Some provision may be made or the State will lose its vote in the electoral college.

A Republican Victory.

CONCORD (N. H.), Jan. 6.—The closing arguments in the proceedings against House Clerk Jewett were made today, and the court dismissed charges against him on the ground of want of jurisdiction. This decision leaves the entire matter of making the roll of members in the House Jewett's hands, and the admission of "colored" members will result in the election of Tuttle (Rep.) for Governor and a Republican United States Senator.

The Alliance in Control.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 8.—The lodge mature organized at noon today. The Alliance, having a clear majority elected temporary officers without trouble. C. H. Pirtle, secretary of State Central Committee of the Independent Party, was elected speaker pro tem of the Senate. S. M. Elmer was elected temporary speaker of House and Eric Johnson secretary. The temporary speaker is without education or experience and a turbulent session is confidently expected.

Denounced the Lodge Bell.

DOVER (Del.), Jan. 6.—The General Assembly convened today. The Democratic caucus nominees were elected. Gov. Biggs's message closed with denunciation of the Force Bill, and the declaration that it is the duty of the Legislature as well as the Governor to protest against it. Legislation for the proper representation of Delaware at the World's Fair was urged.

Minnesota Solons.

ST. PAUL (Minn.), Jan. 6.—The Legislature met today. One ballot was taken in the House for Speaker

On the 11th inst. the Senate, after the adjournment of the House, adjourned until 3 o'clock this afternoon. The Democratic Alliance combination is confident of organizing the upper branch.

A Free Coinage Discussion in the Senate.

Mr. Teller Tells Why He Voted to Shelve the Lodge Bill.

He Opposes the Bond Section of the Financial Measure.

The Shipping Bill Under Consideration in the House—Investigating the Silver Pool—Senator Hearst Better.

By Telegram to The Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—[By the Associated Press.] Senate.—But seven senators were present at 10 o'clock, when the Senate was called to order, and a resolution was adopted requesting the absent members to appear at their own convenience. After a lapse of three-quarters of an hour a quorum appeared.

The presiding officer laid before the Senate a communication from the Secretary of the Treasury, asking an appropriation of $50,000 for the repair of the Government building at Chicago. Referred.

Consideration of the Financial Bill was resumed, and Mr. Teller addressed the Senate in regard to it. For weeks, he said, a bill had been pending before the Senate, the importance of which he did not understate and the benevolent purpose of which he did not question. Yesterday, with the full knowledge of all the criticism his action would bring, with full consciousness, however, that he was in the right, he had voted to lay the bill aside and take up the present measure.

Mr. Teller said that he supposed the slanders that had been perpetrated for the last eight or ten months would be renewed (frankly outside the Senate chamber), to the effect that the friends of the free coinage of silver had entered into an alliance with the opponents of the Elections Bill for its defeat, in return for their votes in favor of the coinage. There was never a more unfounded slander published than this.

Mr. Teller proceeded to criticize Mr. Sherman's speech, which he declared consisted of nothing but an assertion as to what would follow the passage of the pending bill. The Senator from Ohio had declared that the country was on a gold basis. The Senator had attempted to put the country on that basis, but had been unable to do so. The Senator had wonderful facility of being on all sides of all financial questions.

Referring to the condition of the American farmers, and showing it to be less prosperous than it was at the time of the late election, Mr. Teller said that the farmers of America made themselves heard last November, to his regret and the regret of the senators on his side of the chamber. They had been voting almost unanimously with the Democratic party. Why? They had not changed their politics, but they had been dissatisfied with the Republican management of financial affairs, and for once he did not wonder at it. He had tried for years to have the Senate listen to their voice, he knew that they wanted the free coinage of silver.

Proceeding to discuss the section of the bill providing for the purchase of $12,000,000 of silver, Mr. Teller said that he washed his hands of any responsibility for that. He had no interest or sympathy with men who speculated in silver, and he did not want to see the country divided into two classes—the silver speculators and the miners of Colorado. The bill should not have been any anxiety to buy it up, but it was in the hands of political and financial circles in New York, and that was the reason why there was so much anxiety about it in certain quarters. The bill had come from New York and not from the silver States. They were indifferent to the price of silver as a single question, they had some interest in it, but they were not interested in it as a question of price of gold or any other commodity which they produced, but their great interest in the question was that silver should be used as money.

He opposed the bond section of the bill, which provided for the issue of $200,000,000 in two per cent. bonds. It was (Mr. Teller asserted) in the interest of two classes only—the silver speculators of New York and the bankers of the country. It absolutely ignored the people of the United States and their demands for more money. He alluded to the Silver Act of last session as a mere makeshift, and said that there was but one sure method, and that was the free coinage of silver.

Mr. Sherman said that he would at some future time reply to some of Mr. Teller's observations, but he did not care to do so now. Mr. Morrill then addressed the Senate. In view of the late financial panic in New York and of the rather popular demand for some increase of the currency, he had been willing to stretch a point in order to keep step with the senators from Colorado and Nevada, and he had done so by what it felt up. It had not been enough to assent without a whimper to the purchase of $12,000,000 worth of foreign silver supposed to be in the hands of speculators, nor to assent to the provision for the issue of Treasury notes to the extent of $150,000,000 to purchase silver bullion, but it was proposed (when the market price of silver bullion should be 81 or over for 171½ grains of pure silver) that the purchase of silver should cease and that the free coinage of silver should take its place, and yet all these propositions, tipped with silver promises (Mr. Morrill said) no finally, but were to "stretch out to the crack of doom."

He was, and ever had been, sincerely and heartily disposed to support any fair and reasonable measure tending to advance the cause of the silver, but it appeared to him that his silver friends were asking too much, and he had to halt before plunging into a shoreless and bottomless sea. One of the most potent instrumentalities in the march of civilization was an honest and unalterable standard of money.

Mr. Vest argued in favor of the free coinage of silver. He replied to Mr. Morrill, and in the course of his remarks alluded to the statement that he had received a letter from ex-President Cleveland recounting some of his views on the silver question, as not having the slightest foundation. All that he (Mr. Vest) had ever said was that he had reason to believe that Mr. Cleveland had, after a further examination, modified to some extent his opinion in regard to the free coinage of silver. As to the alleged combination between the Democratic senators and the silver senators, he denied its existence. At the close of Mr. Vest's remarks the Senate went into executive session and soon adjourned.

House.—The Senate bill was passed for the relief of the sureties of George W. Hook of California. The House bill, repealing the law authorizing the President to suspend tonnage dues, was passed.

Mr. Farquhar moved that the House go into Committee of the Whole for consideration of the Shipping Bill. Mr. Springer moved an amendment that the committee consider the Options Bill. Rejected—101 to 96. Mr. Farquhar's motion was agreed to—117 to 93.

Mr. Wheeler opposed the measure because it took still more from the hard-earned money of the farmer and laborer. The Republicans, almost to a man, had just voted against the taking up of the Options Bill, and among the negative votes was found the name of the author of the measure (Mr. Butterworth).

Mr. Butterworth inquired whether the Democrats voted to take up the Options Bill for any other purpose than to defeat the pending measure.

Mr. Wheeler responded that the Democrats always voted in the interests of the country. He contended that every effort heretofore made to build up shipping by subsidies had failed, and produced exactly the opposite results to what had been expected. Mr. Herbert (Alabama) spoke at length against the bill, and pending his remarks the committee rose and the House adjourned.

Gen. Miles Is Displaced at the Way He Placed His Troops.

Army Correspondence in Regard to the Fight at Wounded Knee.

A Wagon Train Attacked by Hostiles and a Hot Skirmish Ensues—All Is Quiet at Pine Ridge.

By Telegram to The Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—[By the Associated Press.] The following correspondence in regard to the Col. Forsythe case was made public today. Under date of December 30, Gen. Schofield telegraphed Gen. Miles expressing the belief that he would soon be master of the situation, and asking that his thanks be given to the "brave Seventh Cavalry for their splendid conduct."

Under date of January 1, Gen. Miles telegraphed Gen. Schofield as follows: Your telegram of congratulation to the Seventh Cavalry is received, but as the action of the colonel was a very large matter of serious consideration and will undoubtedly be the subject of investigation, I thought proper to advise you of the above facts so you wish your telegram transmitted as sent?

It is stated that the disposition of 400 soldiers and four pieces of artillery was fatally defective, and a large number of soldiers were killed and wounded by fire from their own ranks, and a very large number of women and children were killed in addition to the Indian men.

Gen. Schofield telegraphed this reply, under date of January 2:

In view of the aspect of the case presented by your telegram yesterday, I will be better not to deliver my message to the Seventh Cavalry until I have seen your report after the investigation you propose. Therefore you will please withhold it until further advised by me.

He also telegraphed Gen. Miles on the same day as follows:

Your dispatch to me yesterday and that to the adjutant-general were shown to the President, and in reply, the Secretary of War directs me to say that the President has heard with great regret the failure of your efforts to secure a settlement of the Sioux trouble without bloodshed. He suggests that possibly a watchful observation of the hostile bands that would prevent their breaking into the settlements and give the Indians time to recover from their present excitement would be well; but he leaves all this to your better information and discretion, and would not have you attempt anything that is necessary to protect the settlements.

He hopes that the incident which has occurred and in reply, the Secretary of War directs me to say that the President has heard with great regret the failure of your efforts to secure a settlement of the Sioux trouble without bloodshed. He suggests that possibly a watchful observation of the hostile bands that would prevent their breaking into the settlements and give the Indians time to recover from their present excitement would be well; but he leaves all this to your better information and discretion, and would not have you attempt anything that is necessary to protect the settlements.

I wish to add to the President's suggestions the hope I still entertain in spite of the unfortunate accidents which have occurred that you may be able, by convincing the Indians that the purposes of the army are not hostile to them, but on the contrary, friendly and dictated by a desire to secure to them a future of peace and prosperity, to obtain their surrender without further conflict.

Gen. Miles telegraphed Gen. Schofield, under date of January 3, as follows:

The directions of the President and yourself are just received. I have surrounded the Indians with my troops, and the Sixth and Ninth Cavalry and the Seventh and Seventeenth Infantry, with 100 Indian scouts, are now on the alert. I am in command of the White River and Fort Totten, with Gen. Brooke in command. This may hold them in check. I am in close communication with the Northern Plains, and the only road to the west is toward the agency, and about half are anxious to come in. The others are making desperate efforts to keep all at bay.

I consider it very important that the five officers whom I recommended be placed in charge of five companies, and that they be approved or disapproved. I have a very great amount of information concerning the conspiracy. It involved all of the tribes in the Northwest, and the tribes in Indian Territory. Sitting Bull would have been at the head and the move was to be made in the spring. They expected to strike west to the ghost of the illusion originated, Nevada.

Gen. Schofield received a telegram from Gen. Miles at Pine Ridge, dated Jan. 5, as follows:

In accordance with your telegram and the President's order, I have detailed a board of officers, consisting of Col. Carr, Sixth Cavalry; Maj. Kent, Fourth Infantry, and Capt. J. D. Smith, Fifth Infantry, to investigate the affair at Wounded Knee. It is in conformity with the President's directions, and I am sure that the board will make a court of inquiry with power to take testimony under oath? Col. Forsythe's command consisted of 26 officers and 433 men. Eighty-two Indian and white women and children were buried on or near the ground. I have relieved Col. Forsythe from command.

Gen. Schofield telegraphed Gen. Miles on the 6th as follows:

In reply to your telegram yesterday, I am directed by the Secretary of War to inform you that it was not the intention to appoint a board of inquiry to order at this time, in the midst of a campaign, any further inquiry than you could yourself make without the necessity of a court, the purpose being simply to determine whether an officer has been so far delinquent in duty as to make it necessary to relieve him from command. I am sure you will follow upon the inquiry which you were expected to cause to be made.

You were expected yourself, first, to inquire into the matter in the event of being disclosed that there had been an insubordinate conduct, to relieve the responsible officers. The directions of the President were suggested by your telegram of the 1st inst. to me.

A NEAT SCHEME.

How the Indians Intended to Attack Pine Ridge Sunday.

DENVER, Jan. 6.—[By the Associated Press.] A News special from Pine Ridge says: Sunday night will never be forgotten by anyone who spent it at Pine Ridge. The Indians have always been permitted to come in and during the day and evening wander around the agency as they pleased, carrying guns in their hands. By the excited, the Indians were soon learned that there was a plan to take advantage of this leniency and gather in the town late in the evening, and at a given signal for each Indian to pick out his man and kill him on the spot.

The success of such a plan was self-evident. There are less than 500 soldiers here and they are on the far corners of the village at their earthworks. Such a force, with their cannon, would keep a large number of Indians at a distance in the daytime, but at night the picket line is necessarily weakened and drawn out in too long a line to hold back any rush, while the cannons are useless.

The holes were to be close at hand, and as soon as the firing began they were to rush in. Finally the half-breeds told that certain Indians were in the scheme, and told the bucks to "light out," or the soldiers would make it worse for them. In an hour there was not an Indian in camp except the scouts and police.

AT PINE RIDGE.

The Hostiles Send Their Wives and Babies to the Agency.

OMAHA, Jan. 6.—[By the Associated Press.] A special from Pine Ridge says: That the search for the dead was not conclusive, was proved today when an Indian brought into the agency the body of Private Francis Shotte of Troop G, Seventh Cavalry. The body was found in a ravine six miles from the battlefield to the north. The unfortunate soldier had been mutilated in a horrible manner. Every bone of his body was broken and the scalp removed. Shotte was probably killed in one of the skirmishes and overlooked. He was buried today with military honors.

Sixty-five squaws, with all the small number of apposes, came in from the hostile camp, about six miles away, today and are being taken care of. There is great suffering among the hostiles on account of scarcity of food or shelter. No movement of the troops seems to be projected. It is stated that Col. Forsythe is not to be reinstated until the close of the campaign.

NO MOVEMENT CONTEMPLATED.

CHICAGO, Jan. 6.—The Inter Ocean Pine Ridge special says: Jack Red Cloud is still at the agency. He applied at the postoffice today for his father's mail and all of the late papers. He didn't receive them. Earthworks around the agency are growing steadily. Gen. Miles will probably succeed in drawing in a lot of hostiles, but there are three or four hundred who are as crazy as Big Foot's men, and nothing can be done but fight them. They say that they want to die and are going to die, and it's only a question of how many will stay with them.

INDIAN AGAINST INDIAN.

OMAHA (Neb.) Jan. 6.—A special from Pine Ridge says: Everything points to a battle between the hostiles and friendly Indians who desire to leave the camp and come to the agency. The Brules threaten death to the first person who attempts to desert the hostiles' band. The older Indians insist on fighting.

HOLDING A CONFERENCE.

Five of the Hostile Chiefs Visit Gen. Miles.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—[By the Associated Press.] Gen. Schofield has received the following telegram from Gen. Miles, dated Pine Ridge, S. D., January 6.

In answer to a communication I sent to the hostile camp yesterday, saying that five men could come in and learn what I expected them to do, the following came in: Big Red, He Dog, Little Hawk, Jack Red Cloud and Big Hawk. The prospects at present are favorable to the whole company surrendering, but I do not wish to announce such a thing until I have seen the condition of the troops.

GEN. MILES AND THE AGENTS.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 6.—It is stated at the Interior Department that War Department officials today received a telegram from Gen. Miles urging the prompt approval of his recommendation that the Indian agents at South Dakota agencies be superseded by army officers.

The situation demands that changes be made at once. Secretary Noble declined to say anything upon the subject when questioned today; but it is asserted that he will vigorously oppose the adoption of the plan, upon the ground that it would inevitably result in undoing all, or nearly all, of the good that has been done in recent years toward the material advancement of the Indian tribes of the Northwest.

A CABINET DISCUSSION.

A Cabinet meeting today considered the Indian question, especially with reference to Gen. Miles' proposition to relieve the Indian agents of charge of the agencies near the scene of trouble and replace them with officers of the army. Secretary Noble is known to be earnestly opposed to such a plan, and its accomplishment is, therefore, a matter of doubt.

THE GOVERNMENT HERDS.

The Commissioner of Indian Affairs has received the following telegram, dated Pine Ridge:

Chief Herder Hugh has returned with 300 cattle. I have no information as to whether any more scattered about the range. Hugh says he thinks that the hostiles burned the ranch after he left.

These 300 head are all that are recovered from the original herd of about thirty-five hundred head driven off by the hostiles.

A WAGON TRAIN ATTACKED.

Another Hot Engagement Near the Wounded Knee Battlefield.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 6.—[By the Associated Press.] A special from the camp near Wounded Knee Creek, S. D., gives the particulars of another engagement which took place at that point yesterday morning. A detachment of thirty men was sent out from camp to meet a wagon train with supplies for the camp, and when ten miles out the wagons were found to be besieged by a band of 100 Indians. On seeing the troops approaching, the redskins scattered, but immediately returned to the attack on finding that there were only a small number of men in the party.

Couriers were sent back to camp for reinforcements, but in the meantime an incessant fire was kept up on both sides, resulting in the wounding of one soldier and the killing and wounding of several Indians, the exact number of which cannot be ascertained, as the warriors approached, the redskins scattered, but immediately returned to the attack on finding that there were only a small number of men in the party.
